GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

(November 18, 1863)

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

These "Little Catalogues" are intended to give reasonably full lists of material upon certain subjects for which there is a large demand from readers, but it should be understood that the lists are not exhaustive—they do not contain everything in the library upon their subjects. The card catalogue, in the delivery room, is, practically, a complete index to the contents of the library. Books not in the library will, if approved, be bought on request.

Books whose class numbers are preceded by the letters R. D. belong in the reference department. They are for use here and may not be taken from the building except in special cases and by special permission. It is desirable that the thousands who come to the Danforth Library Building each week should become better acquainted with this department of the library. Many valuable and important books are shelved in the reference room, and an assistant is always available to give help in a search for information.

Any book listed here, except those in the department of fiction, if out when asked for, will be reserved and the applicant notified when the book has been returned. Readers not finding what they want should apply at the delivery desk where assistance will always be gladly given.

Abbreviations—

Ed.—editor; Comp.—compiler. R. D.—Reference department

The sign of † included in a class number indicates that the book is of extra size and is placed on a lower shelf out of the regular order. When calling for a book by the class number it should be given entire, as printed, including all letters and other characters.
